

Prophets tell of the promised Messiah.

Isaiah 9:1-7; Micah 1:1; 5:2-5

Isaiah the prophet wrote down many things God said would happen. One message Isaiah wrote was God's promise that a special baby would be born. This baby would be the Savior—the One who would save people from the punishment they deserved.

Isaiah wrote that this Savior sent by God would be known by many names. One name was the Wonderful Counselor, because He would teach His people how to follow God. Isaiah also called this Savior the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father and the Prince of Peace. The Savior would be God's own Son!

About the same time Isaiah was telling God's messages, God sent another prophet named Micah. Micah told the people that a ruler would be born in Bethlehem, even though Bethlehem was a little town that didn't seem very important. Micah said this ruler would be different from any other ruler the people had known. He would save people from death.

When the people heard God's promises to send a Savior, they were happy at the news. But then they began to disobey God again. God, however, did not forget His promise of a Savior. Seven hundred years later, in the little town of Bethlehem, this great Savior was born. His name was Jesus!
